Reduced receptors for serotonin may mean that the body needs more serotonin to produce a normal effect.

It has also prompted the emergency rooms in Spokane to band together and mount a program that uses a shared database to track people who obtain pain meds in the ER.